

ABSTRACT

A card for transmitting data over at least one optical fiber includes a transmitter having at least one light source and a phase modulator for phase
5 modulating light from the source so as to create phase-modulated optical signals in the light as a function of an input electronic data stream; and a receiver having an interferometer for reading received optical signals.